Jimmy Doolittle’s co-pilot, Lt Col. Dick Cole, will be the honored guest and speaker at the Pacific Aviation Museum-Pearl Harbor on December 6-9th, 2007

The Pacific Aviation Museum-Pearl Harbor is celebrating our first anniversary on December 6th, 2007 with honored guest Lt. Col. Dick Cole, Jimmy Doolittle’s co-pilot during their raid on Tokyo in 1942. This special December 6th benefit will be held in the museum’s Hangar 37 under the wings of the planes that made WWII so memorable, including the B-25, like what the Doolittle Raiders flew 65 years ago.

December 7th-9th, Lt. Col. Dick Cole will be giving a lecture and book signing alongside Jonna Doolittle Hoppes, Gen. Doolittle’s granddaughter and author of “Calculated Risk.” Dick Cole offers a rare look into the raid over Tokyo while Jonna Doolittle Hoppes’ book gives an insiders perspective of the man who lead the raid 65 years ago that changed the course of the war.

Visitors to the museum, can experience history where it was made and learn about it from those that made it.

SCOUT SATURDAYS: Arrange for a Special Scout Outing at the Pacific Aviation Museum

Girl and Boy Scouts of all ages are invited to experience a unique and interactive perspective on the aviation history on historic Ford Island.

The Pacific Aviation Museum not only spotlights the achievements of those who flew, but also the behind-the-scenes heroes, telling the little known stories that surrounded WWII, making the events and people memorable. In addition to Pacific Aviation Museum’s collection of WWII airplanes and exhibits, visiting Scout Troops will be able to “fly” in the Education Center’s Flight Lab. The Flight Lab is equipped with individual flight stations that bring to life the aviation history that occurred in Hawaii and the Pacific.

“Scout Saturdays” is available to Troops of 10 to 20 Scouts from 10:00 am to 1:00pm.
$15.00 per person; includes Guided tour, Flight Lab experience and pre-arranged lunch.
RESERVATIONS REQUIRED

Guided Educational Tours for school groups and activity programs are also available Monday through Friday. Call 808-441-1012 or email KT Budde-Jones, Education Director at kt@pacificaviationmuseum.org

NEW ENGINE DISPLAY

The battle for air supremacy was not just fought in the skies but also on the drafting tables where new designs and technology were being developed as fast as the American production lines could make them. The museum has highlighted these advancements in a new exhibit. Now on display is an Allison inline water cooled engine and an air cooled Pratt & Whitney radial engine. The Allison is similar to the ones used in a P-40, P-38, P-39 and P-51. The radial engine is similar to the ones used in Wildcats, Hellcats, and carrier–based planes. New exhibits and additions are in the works; come and see our progress.

1945 NAS PEARL HARBOR PLANE RETURNS TO FORD ISLAND 62 YEARS LATER

Thanks to the generous donation of Big Island resident Thomas Kawai (photos at right), the museum has a WWII Stinson L-5 E liaison airplane that was stationed on Ford Island in June 1945. Mr. Kaiawe’s L-5 was used as an air ambulance carrying to safety a single passenger on a stretcher. The L-5’s ability to take off and land from unimproved airstrips in the South Pacific suited it for this purpose. Mr. Kaiawe’s plane was stationed at NAS Pearl Harbor and has never left Hawaii in its 62 year history.

Thomas Kaiawe also donated his 1942 Harley Davidson Military Police motorcycle to the museum. This vintage bike is complete with original saddle bags and gun holster, authentic in detail and still in working order.

Kona Transportation, Young Brothers Shipping and Westpac Trucking Company all donated their time and services to transport the plane and the motorcycle from the Big Island to its new home at the Pacific Aviation Museum. Home again on Ford Island.
Gary Nakamatsu, representing A & B Foundation, presented to the museum the final $25,000 check of their $50,000 pledge. Alexander and Baldwin Foundation has been a benefactor and supporter of the museum for many years. BRAVO! BRAVO!

The Pacific Aviation Museum Board of Directors extend their heartfelt thanks to KHON TV newscaster, Joe Moore, for writing, starring in and staging “Prophecy & Honor” – The Court Martial of Billy Mitchell, for the benefit of the museum. Presented last month at Hawaii Theatre Center to a sellout crowd, the stage play was presented with full costumes, lighting, props and dramatic staging.

Guests who chose VIP seating for Opening Night were treated to a “Come Meet the Cast” Party, where they were thrilled to “rub elbows” with Hollywood stars George Segal and Richard Dreyfuss, and met with all of our local talent, including the always hilarious Frank DeLima, and finally got to talk story with Joe Moore in person.

Beyond realizing substantial funding for the museum, the play produced a plethora of PR for America’s newest and most significant aviation museum, and brought to life Billy Mitchell, considered to be the father of the U.S. Air Force.

Our thanks to the cast and crew and especially to Joe Moore for their talent and time to produce “Prophecy & Honor” for a job well done! Mahalo!

Interim Executive Director

THE MUSEUM TAKES FLIGHT

WOW! AWESOME! INCREDIBLE! PROFOUND! These are the sentiments of a great majority of the visitors to the Museum as they stroll back in time to World War II in the Pacific and get acquainted with the aircraft and people who were there. The first year of the museum has been amazing and incredible all at the same time. Amazing for the thousands of people who have come forward to donate their time, talent and contributions. Incredible for the profound stories of the heroes and their families.

A year ago the museum launched its Membership Program. It was highly successful and garnered over 1,500 members for the museum. As the first year anniversary of the museum approaches, the Membership Renewal Program takes flight!

Support the important work of the Pacific Aviation Museum–Pearl Harbor by renewing your membership today. Mahalo!
